The Big Freeze - Top Documentary Films

Imagine our world in the not-too-distant future? In parts of the northern hemisphere, the temperature plummets to -90 F. At 130 below, public transportation fails.

Those caught outside freeze to death. Buildings collapse under the weight of snow and ice.

The power goes out, society collapses, and anarchy takes its place.

Could this be a vision of our future? In this documentary, Naked Science examines what may cause temperatures to plummet and how this could spell disaster for our planet.

Global Warming or a New Ice Age: Documentary Film Jun 22, 2012

Global cooling was a conjecture during the 1970s of imminent cooling of the Earth's surface and atmosphere along with a posited commencement of glaciation. This hypothesis had little support in the scientific community, but gained temporary popular attention due to a combination of a slight downward trend of temperatures from the 1940s to the early 1970s and press reports that did not accurately reflect the effect the scientific understanding of ice age cycles. In contrast to the global cooling conjecture, the current scientific opinion on climate change is that the Earth has not durably cooled, but undergone global warming throughout the twentieth century.

Climate Scientists Jump Ship as CO2 Theory Collapses

May 29, 2013

Climate Scientists like Professor Judith Curry abandon alarmism as the Carbon Dioxide theory collapses in acrimony.

Common sense prevails as temperature data proves that global warming isn't happening(as predicted).

Sceptics proved right as the groupthink of the climate change hysteria is revealed.

Climate scientist Hans von Storch; "Unfortunately in climate science there is a tendency to proclaim absolute truths and to link these immediately to instructions on actions to take,' von Storch said. '

The climate pope tells us what has to be done, and for the people it's: keep your mouths shut. Scientists have been taking over the roles of medicine men and priests. That's not the job of scientists.

Science is supposed to help understand problems, show the possibilities that exist in dealing with them. The best is to show many possibilities. Then the political process has to decide the path to take.'

But some of his colleagues in science like to use 'stories that point to a catastrophe,' said the professor of meteorology. One example was the assumption that our region would see 'murderous violent storms'.

But there was no data showing this. 'It all has a cultural, anthropological background' . 'If you sin, then you will be punished. And the punishment always takes on an environmental dimension which also included storms in the past. In former times it was God's punishment. Today it's punishment by Nature. Nature is to keep man in check. And for this we see idiotic films like The Day After Tomorrow."

"With snappy and short statements like 'snow will be a thing of the past', the loud speakers among the scientists are putting the credibility of science at stake."

British environmentalist James Lovelock admitted that,

"The problem is we don't know what the climate is doing. We thought we knew 20 years ago. That led to some alarmist books—mine included—because it looked clear-cut, but it hasn't happened."

"The climate is doing its usual tricks. There's nothing much really happening yet. We were supposed to be halfway toward a frying world now."
